THE RESTLESS FOUNDER / FREE GUIDE

The Restart Week

Seven days to come back to yourself after a bad stretch, with AI doing the heavy lifting and you taking the next right step.

You are not behind. You are back.

You are so back.

A bad week, month or year does not cancel what you have already done. Start by remembering who has been doing the work.

DAY 1

Write your receipts. Three things you have overcome. Three words that are true of you on a good day. Keep it factual, not flattering. This is the person who is restarting.

DAY 2

Decide you are back. Whatever happened, happened. Write one sentence: "From today I am going to do what I said I would." Then name the next right step and make it small enough to do before lunch.

1 THE RECEIPTS

I am restarting after a rough stretch. Here is what I have overcome and what I have built: (paste a few lines). Reflect it back to me as a plain list of facts, with no hype. Then ask me three questions that help me see what I am still carrying and what I can put down.

2 THE NEXT RIGHT STEP

Here is what is on my plate: (paste it). Do not make a plan. Pick the one next right step that takes under thirty minutes, tell me why it comes first, and give me the first sentence of it so I can start now.

A lull is not a verdict. Do not paste private details about other people into any AI tool.

Ten plain truths.

Read them slowly. One or two will sting. That one is yours for today.

1	Trauma explains it. It does not excuse it. Name what happened, then name what is still yours to do.
2	You already know what to do. Write it in one line.
3	You may not be confused, you may be avoiding. Which task have you re-read five times?
4	Nothing changes until you do. Change one thing in your day, not your whole life.
5	Sometimes you like the idea of change more than change itself. Pick the smallest real action.
6	You may not need closure, you may need to move on. What does moving on look like as one action?
7	You may not be stuck, you may be comfortable. What would you choose if comfort did not get a vote?
8	You do not lack time. Sometimes you lack structure. Put it in the calendar. Let AI draft the rest.
9	You can repeat what you struggle to confront. Name the pattern in one line.
10	Most of this is not about knowing more. It is about having a system. That is what the rest of this week is for.

3 THE HONEST MIRROR

Here are the three truths that stung most, and one line on each:
(paste them). Do not soothe me and do not diagnose me. Tell me what pattern you can see, and one small action for each truth that I can do this week.

A reflection tool, not therapy. If something here touches something heavy, a qualified person is the right place for it.

Six months.

Six months can be enough for a life to look very different. The trick is one area at a time, not everything on Monday.

Month 1 Money

One number you have been avoiding. Look at it. Write the next step.

Month 2 Body

One repeatable habit you can keep on your worst day.

Month 3 Relationship

One honest conversation, or one act of showing up, per week.

Month 4 Place

Where you live and work. One change that makes the days easier.

Month 5 Work

The one project or skill that moves your career. Protect time for it.

Month 6 Mindset

How you talk to yourself, and what you read, watch and repeat.

DAY 4

Pick your order. Rank the six areas by what hurts most, and start there.

DAY 5

Let AI draft the plan. You decide, it drafts. Review it, cut it in half, then put month one in the calendar.

4 THE SIX MONTH PLAN

My six areas, in the order I chose, are: (list them). For each month, give me one theme, three small actions per week that take under thirty minutes, and one way I will know it is working. Keep each month under 80 words. Plain language, and nothing that needs money or time I have not told you I have.

A planning template, not financial, medical or legal advice. Results depend on you and many things outside your control.

You are not behind.

Sometimes you look around and wonder where everyone is. That does not mean you are lost. It can mean you are on a different path.

1 Name who you are comparing yourself to. One person, one account, one number. Write it down. Comparison is easier to shrink when it has a name.

2 Ask what you actually know about their path. You see their results, not their cost, their start or their help. You do not see the whole road.

3 Say what your path is for. Your life, your family, your freedom, your time. If it is built on purpose, it can look different and still be right.

5 THE PATH CHECK

I keep feeling behind compared with: (name). Here is what I actually want from my life: (three lines). Help me separate what I truly want from what I am only copying. Then give me one thing to do this week that is on my path, not theirs.

Different is not behind. Welcome. There are more of us out here than you think.

The week on one page.

DAY 1	Receipts. Three things overcome, three true words.
DAY 2	Decide. One sentence, one next right step.
DAY 3	Truths. Read the ten, work the three that stung.
DAY 4	Order. Rank your six areas.
DAY 5	Plan. AI drafts six months, you cut it in half.
DAY 6	Path. Name the comparison, say what your path is for.
DAY 7	Review. What changed, what did not, what is next week's next right step?

6 THE REVIEW

Here is what I did this week: (paste it). Tell me what I completed, what I avoided, and the pattern between them. Then suggest one small step for tomorrow and one thing to stop doing. Keep it kind and specific.

If you can only do one thing, do the next right step. Then do it again tomorrow. That is how a week turns into a restart.

A working template to adapt, not medical, legal or financial advice. Do not paste private details about other people into any AI tool.

You are back. Take the next step.
