THE RESTLESS FOUNDER / FREE TEMPLATE

The Hyperfixation Launchpad

A one-hour template for turning whatever has your obsession right now into something that actually moves.

Obsession needs somewhere to go.

The idea is never the problem.

When something grabs you, the energy is enormous. The trouble is the next morning: the idea is still a feeling, and nobody has turned it into a first step.

This template catches the obsession while it is hot and turns it into a short list you can start on today. You talk. AI organises. You choose and begin.

What it does

Captures the idea, shrinks it to three steps, and gives you a first one that takes twenty-five minutes.

What it does not do

Make you finish everything. It only has to get you moving.

Fast starts are your strength. This gives them a direction.

Pour it out.

Open a fresh chat. Use voice. Talk for three to five minutes about the thing you cannot stop thinking about.

THE DUMP

```
I am going to ramble about something I am obsessed with right now. Do not interrupt. When I say "done", give me back: what I am actually trying to make or achieve in one sentence, who it is for, what I already have that I can use, and what I seem to be avoiding or unsure about.
```

THE SHRINK

```
Based on that, give me the smallest version of this that is real: something I could finish in seven days and show to one person. Describe it in three sentences, and list what I should leave out of that first version.
```

Three steps. One to start now.

THE THREE STEPS

```
Break the seven-day version into three steps, in order. For each one give me: the outcome in a single sentence, how long it should take, and the first physical action. Then pick step one and break it into a twenty-five minute task I can start right now, with the exact first thing to open or type.
```

Then start the clock

Set a timer for twenty-five minutes. Do only the task AI gave you. When it ends, stop, even if you want to keep going, and write one line about what you finished.

1. Open the file, page or tool. Nothing else.
2. Do the first action. Not the best version, the first.
3. Timer ends: write the one line, then decide whether to go on.

When the next idea arrives.

It will. A new obsession tends to show up halfway through the last one. Do not fight it, park it.

PARK IT

```
New idea, do not act on it: [describe]. Add it to my parking lot with a one-line description and the date. Then remind me what I was in the middle of and give me the next step on that.
```

THE WEEKLY PICK

```
Here is my parking lot and my current project: [paste]. Which one idea has the strongest pull and the most use of things I already have? Tell me whether to keep going with the current project or switch, and give me one reason. Be direct.
```

Parked is not lost.

One hour, in order.

1. Minutes 0 to 15: the dump, then the shrink.
2. Minutes 15 to 25: the three steps. Choose the one you start with.
3. Minutes 25 to 55: the twenty-five minute task. Timer on.
4. Minute 55: write one line about what moved.

You already have the part most people lack: the obsession. This is just the bridge between the idea and the first thing you do about it.

A working template to adapt, not medical, legal or financial advice. Change the words until they sound like you.

Obsession in. Something real out.