THE RESTLESS FOUNDER / FREE TEMPLATE

The Hyperfixation Loop

A simple template for turning the thing you cannot stop thinking about into videos people watch.

Make the first one. The loop does the rest.

How the loop works.

When you are deep in something you love, you already have more to say than most people ever post. The loop turns that into a habit that feeds itself.

1. Pick the thing. The hobby, craft, project or idea you keep coming back to this month.

2. Make one video about it. Short, rough, honest. No setup, no perfect take.

3. Notice what lands. One piece gets a better response than the others. That is a signal.

4. Make the next one from it. Same thread, a new angle. The interest and the audience grow together.

Where it stalls

Not at the interest. At the setting up: what to say, how to film it, how to edit it, where to post it.

How we fix it

Let AI hold the setup. You bring the interest and your voice. The rest of this template does the rest.

Your job is the interest. Everything else is a system.

Name the hyperfixation.

Fill these in before you make anything. Two minutes, written on paper or in a note.

01 THE THING

What I cannot stop thinking about right now is:

_____

02 THE PROOF

I could talk about it for an hour without notes because:

03 THE PERSON

Someone just starting out in this would most want to know:

04 THE THING I DO

The part I do differently from most people is:

05 THE FEELING

When it goes well, it feels like: _____

PASTE INTO AI

Here are my answers: [paste]. Give me twenty short video ideas about this, each one a single line that starts with the problem a beginner has. Order them from easiest to hardest to film.

The first video, in three lines.

You do not need an edit. You need a hook, one point and an ending. Talk to the camera like you are telling a friend.

LINE 1 HOOK	Open with the thing they get wrong. "Most people start [your thing] by doing [common mistake]." One sentence, no hello.
LINE 2 POINT	Give them one useful idea. The single thing you wish someone had told you. Say it simply and show it if you can.
LINE 3 END	Close on a line they can repeat. A sentence that sums it up. Then stop. Do not explain the ending.

PROMPT: TURN AN IDEA INTO THE THREE LINES

My idea is: [paste one idea]. Write me a hook, one point and one ending line, in plain spoken English, under 80 words total. Keep my voice direct and warm. No hype, no jargon.

Record it in one take. If you laugh or stumble, leave it in. People watch a person, not a perfect take.

Read the response. Make the next one.

After each video, spend two minutes with this. It is what keeps the loop turning.

1 Which moment got the most reaction? Look at where people watched to the end, or what they commented about.

2 What did they ask? Questions in the comments are the next three videos.

3 Make a follow-up on the strongest moment. Same thread, one step deeper. Do not start something new until this one has run its course.

PROMPT: THE NEXT VIDEO

Here is my last video script: [paste]. Here are the comments I got:
[paste]. Suggest three follow-up videos that go one step deeper, each as a one-line hook. Pick the one you think has the best chance and say why in one sentence.

A video that does not land is not a failure. It is information. Note it and move to the next.

The loop tracker.

Copy this into a note. One row per video. Fill it in after you post.

Video #	Hook	Best moment	Question they asked	Next video
1	______	______	______	______
2	______	______	______	______
3	______	______	______	______
4	______	______	______	______
5	______	______	______	______

Your first week

1. Today: fill in the five answers and get your twenty ideas.
2. Tomorrow: film video 1, in one take.
3. Day three: read the response, then film video 2.

Not medical advice. This is a creative method, not a treatment, and it sits alongside whatever support you already use.

The interest was never the problem. It was the setting up.
